The recoil spring for 1911 Commander in .45 ACP caliber is an essential component to maintain the performance and reliability of your weapon.

Located between the slide and the guide rod, its role is to absorb the energy generated during firing and return the slide to its initial position, thus preparing the weapon for the next shot. A spring in good condition ensures a smooth cycle, reduces wear on internal components and improves the overall accuracy of the weapon.

Compatible with Colt 70 series pistols.
