6th edition!

Reloading Manual No. 6 is the culmination of nearly half a century of work, research, and testing, in close collaboration, first with the former powder service, then the NPE, without forgetting the participation of major ballistics laboratories, munitions manufacturers, and reloading equipment manufacturers.

Of course, in such a work, the parts dealing with the history of powders, ballistics, and even the adjustment of tools, remain immutable, and it could not be otherwise; on the other hand, the tables include fifteen additional calibers, with speeds/pressures, and also new loadings to complete those already existing.

Of course, in such a book, the parts dealing with the history of powders, ballistics, and even the setting of tools, remain unchangeable, and it can not be otherwise; on the other hand, the tables have fifteen additional calibres, with speeds / pressures, and also new loads to complete those already existing.

The chapter devoted to high-precision reloading has been completely overhauled; not to mention novel additions for: powder grading, loading density, rechambering and recanquering, corner minute, recoil speed, as well as many text changes, all with new photos.

The fundamental purpose of the book has however been retained, that is to say, give the beginner a good starting point, and allow the confirmed reloader to have a real working tool ...
