Revolvers Rhino Chiappa Firearms

Revolutionary revolvers with the particularity of having the barrel in the axis of the lowest chamber of the barrel and not the upper chamber, as on conventional revolvers.

This technical specificity makes it possible to bring the axis of recoil closer to that of the shooter's hand, thus limiting the ascent of the barrel and allowing a better control of the weapon and the firing in double tap closer together. Other features: Ergal carcass (aluminum alloy), Picatinny rails. Double and single action, except 2 "in CAD (double action only).
